

The HealthStore Foundation®

Providing Hope through High-Quality Healthcare
Q4 2012

In Kenya, 12% of children die before their 5th birthday.

And around the world, nearly 30,000 children die each day...and almost two out of three of these child deaths occur from diseases and illnesses that can be prevented or treated for less than a Starbucks Latte.

In Africa, 36 countries are dangerously lacking in healthcare workers. And existing healthcare workers are often too poorly distributed to reach the estimated 250,000 women and 5.5 million children whose lives could be saved every year with access to essential care. Even when people can access healthcare, prevailing standards of care—and quality of drugs—are often too low to be effective.

The HealthStore Foundation® empowers African nurses to save the lives of children and families. HealthStore has developed the “CFW” (Child and Family Wellness) system for operating a basic medical clinic in rural and slum areas of Africa. Each CFW clinic is owned and operated by a local nurse who makes a living while saving lives; the CFW system targets a short list of diseases responsible for approximately 70% of illness and death in local communities. HealthStore uses the CFW franchise model to incentivize nurses to provide high-quality care to poor communities.

Since inception 12 years ago, The HealthStore Foundation’s CFW network of medical clinics has served over three million people in E. Africa.

HealthStore's CFW network distributes high-quality medicines in Africa where counterfeit and substandard drugs are rampant. CFW clinics save lives with good medicine in areas where bad medicine kills people.

In August 2010, Interpol seized 10 tons of counterfeit drugs in E. Africa

While saving lives, CFW also builds sustainable businesses for local nurses, creates jobs for community health workers, and stimulates economies by keeping children in school and adults at work.

CFW franchisees often work long hours to serve their communities with high-quality medicines

HealthStore is an award-winning pioneer,

using CFW to reach places where some people walk miles to reach the nearest healthcare facility, where other people die because the drugs they receive are counterfeit, and where everyone lives on frighteningly low incomes (often $1-$2 per day).

- 2011: First Global Social Franchising Conference awarded HealthStore's CFW network in "commendation of excellence in quality assurance standards, systems and documentation."
